

Supporting the development of a love of reading at home

If children see us participating in an activity and enjoying it then they will want to do it too!

Developing a love of reading begins with sharing books together from an early age but it is never too late to start.

Set aside time each day to share a book. This is often at bedtime and none of us are too old to share the collective cuddle of enjoying a book being read to us. Once a child can read independently, bedtime reading does not need to stop. Wonderful warm memories can still be made through sharing a good book together.